IDENTITY.

HUMAN

DESIGNATION	Manuel Rengifo
ORIGIN	Santiago, Chile
FUNCTION	Software engineer
STATUS	Awake

I write systems for a living. Distributed, deterministic, documented. Things that are judged by how completely they refuse to surprise anyone.

I am good at it. It is not where the interesting part of me lives.

MACHINE

DESIGNATION	InformaticNuke
ORIGIN	Unlogged
FUNCTION	Peak time · Industrial · Schranz
STATUS	Online

At night I build the opposite. Machines whose entire purpose is to surprise. The kick is the only contract; everything above it is permitted to fail, and the failures are the point.

Distortion is not an effect here. It is the record of something being pushed past what it was specified to do.

Industrial techno gets called cold. It isn't. It is the sound of something built by hand that got away from the person who built it — and that is the most human thing I know how to make.

THE SOUND.

InformaticNuke is the techno project of Manuel Rengifo — a software engineer building industrial machinery out of code and distortion.

Heavy peak-time techno meets high-impact EDM in a raw, underground atmosphere. InformaticNuke builds sets on driving basslines, hard-edged transitions and relentless energy that pushes a crowd into full momentum — a style that blends festival-level intensity with the darkness of warehouse culture into something immersive and physical, made for dancefloors that never lose their fire.

Each set is a journey of pressure, rhythm and tension, rising constantly until the room feels like it could explode. The sound is heavy, sharp, and unapologetically underground.
